The Wildflower Collection

the inspiration

This collection was inspired by the imperfect beauty of wildflowers strewn across the white canvas of a vintage cotton voile dress.

There was something comforting and relatable about the imperfect beauty of these wildflowers that spoke to many of the fears that so often assail the feminine heart—like the fear of failure, of somehow falling short, or not measuring up.

They demonstrated to me that imperfection does not preclude beauty, but rather gives it the freedom to blossom even where it was never intentionally planted.

So this collection is about cultivating beauty despite unexpected circumstances (read: COVID!), our human limitations, insecurities, life’s curveballs, and failures along the way.

It’s about sewing the seeds you’ve been given—even in the midst to darkness—and having faith that they will blossom into something beautiful.

And so it is my sincere hope that this collection inspires you to wholeheartedly pursue whatever passion has been placed on your heart, with the unreserved boldness of a wildflower blooming solely to inspire those who need to be touched by its imperfect beauty.

I hope you enjoy it!

the wildflower dress

The 1960’s wildflower dress* that you see woven—both figuratively and literally—Into many of the pieces in this collection, belonged to a very stylish Polish noblewoman named Włada.

Her life, like the wildflowers on her dress, wasn’t perfect. Her family lost almost everything during the war, and after moving to the UK with her husband Stan—a WWII pilot in the Royal Air Force—Włada could only admire the beautiful clothes lining the windows of stylish Bristol boutiques.

Her modest beginnings eventually became the catalyst for taking her love of beauty and fashion into her own hands, and learning how to sew. Włada went on to create many beautiful dresses, and the wildflower dress happened to be one of them.

Like Włada’s story, the collection is about cultivating beauty amidst imperfection and setbacks. It’s about harnessing the resilience, colours, simplicity, and unpretentious beauty of wildflowers to create something that serves as a reminder of the perennial nature of beauty, that like wildflowers, blossoms even out of the darkest of places.

Sadly, I did not take a photo of Włada’s original wildflower dress before incorporating it into the collection. Enclosed below is a swatch of fabric from the dress.*

Ladey was inspired by a lifelong passion for cultivating beauty in womenswear.

My goal as a designer is to create dresses with a purpose—every dress is designed to reawaken the desire in women to embrace beauty—inside and out—and to seek, inspire, and cultivate it in all aspects of their lives.

Each piece is lovingly brought to life with meticulous attention to detail—from the earliest stages of design, fabric selection, construction and tailoring, to the finishing touches.

Ladey embodies a new genre of fashion, one that is not defined by passing trends, but rather by a timeless elegance and a feminine silhouette—qualities that transcend trends and time.

Ladey's creations are meant to complement the inherent dignirty and femininity of the woman who wears them, while conveying an air of elegance, refinement, European sophistication, and grace.

Every single garment is made in Canada, and only the finest materials and fabrics are used.

who wears la de y

Her manner is refined, her poise is graceful.

She believes in cultivating spiritual, emotional, intellectual and physical well-being.

She values quality, is moved by beauty, strives for authenticity and never settles for the imitation. She believes in compassion, love that endures, prefers being remembered, to being noticed, and above all, cherishes faith, family and friendships.

Her holistic approach to life also permeates her wardrobe. What she wears fuses effortless elegance, immaculate quality, impeccable tailoring and a timeless silhouette—classic yet chic.

Her clothing is her second skin—a seamless extension of who she inherently is—a woman and a lady.

designer bio

Sabina Kasprzak was born in Vancouver, BC and at the age of eight, moved to Poland, where she discovered and fell in love with the world of high-end European fashion. Ever since, a significant part of her heart and life has been dedicated to design.

At 17 she moved back to Canada, and following high school pursued a Fashion Design Diploma at the University of the Fraser Valley. In her graduating year of the program, Sabina qualified as a finalist in the Smirnoff Fashion Awards International Competition in Toronto, and later that year, received the Most Creative Designer of the Year Award for her graduation collection—Style of Edge. After graduation, she took a detour from fashion, and earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Communication at Trinity Western University.

Since then, she has qualified as a semi-finalist, in the Oskary Fashion Awards Competition in Warsaw (Poland) in 2005 and 2009, and has been creating high-end, custom-designed dresses for private clients ever since.

Sabina specializes in high-end womenswear, and considers meticulous attention to detail, the pursuit of beauty, and a love for working with luxurious fabrics, a key element of her design aesthetic.
